FLY LIGHT BEST PRACTICES

Remember that insect traps are a monitoring tool. They can help you identify problem areas you need to address. But they won't fix the conditions that are attracting them.

Replace the bulbs in each of your fly lights every 9-12 months. Each bulb has a chemical coating that maximizes the amount of UV light it transmits. As the bulb ages, this coating wears out, diminishing the trap's effectiveness.

Replace the glue boards in each of your fly lights once a month.

Place fly lights in areas with bright lighting, such as large windows. Other light sources compete for the bugs' attention and will diminish the fly light's effectiveness.
